PAPER FIRE ROOKIE is a 2D platforming action-RPG that lets you take part in the overall development of the world, with the chance to play story elements and design your own content! One of the biggest strengths of Paper Fire Rookie, is that the level design is fully customisable, allowing you to create your own levels and design them freely with a very simple to use level editor. This freedom of level design, combined with the ability to take part in the creation of the game through various quests, is in my view one of the biggest reasons that this game has become what it is today! The overall game design is something that has been worked on together with the players from the start, and the community has been instrumental in pushing the game further and further. Just some of the things that have come from the feedback and contributions of the community include: the deep, yet often very simple, combat system, the improved graphics (the game has transitioned from the old retro pixel graphics, to a more modern, more polished looking pixel graphics and even to something you might recognize as a "marshmallow" styled pixel style graphics), the introduction of a big, open world with lots of procedurally generated content, the chance for you to name your own monsters, a complex survivor mode (optional) that lets you experience survival mode without any content being blocked off (and therefore being a bit too easy), the addition of a save system to boot, proper auto-saving and timing on smaller levels, and, of course, the most recent addition to the game are the crafting mechanics. You can now craft items and weapons out of various available components. You can gather most things on the ground and in the world, or you can bring your own items with you and harvest them. I've personally spent tons of time on these new crafting and gathering mechanics, so I would love to see you play around with them. YOUR CREATIONS CAN CHANGE THE FUTURE OF THE GAME! The game is an open-world platformer, meaning that there are no pre-made levels or enemy patterns. You are the most important part of the overall design process, and every time you play, you are helping to dictate the direction that the game goes. In the future you will be able to design your own levels and environments, and as you play, the world itself will react to changes in what you design, and changes in what you play. The world is constantly growing and

Detective Steven Scharf was a real slash amateur detective - and this hobby had cost him the love of his life, Wanda Jones. She was a homicide detective with the bureau of community revitalization (bureaucracy). Of course, he understood. She was a glorified social worker - the joke being, that the bureaucrats at the bureau hated criminals. So he was all for a neatly wrapped, happy ending to this case - one in which the criminal was a power-leech politician, while an apparently uncared for pair of kids were neglected by an absentee father. In the end, he closed his wine glass with a snap, smiled, and waited for things to unfold. Detective Scharf had been at the bureau for eight years, and this was the first case he had solved. He couldn't help but enjoy his little victory, as he stepped out into the crisp autumn sky. He turned to gaze at the pile of men that had been his former squad. "I'm proud of you boys," he said. They all waved their thanks, which suddenly seemed rather silly. Dawn was coming to the east as Detective Scharf pulled out his keys. As he entered his two-story apartment, he glanced at the clock. It read 6:32 a.m. It was a Saturday, so that meant... more than four hours until he returned to work. Wonder where that came from. He had always had a problem just sleeping in. Get up, move around for a while, enjoy the peace and quiet. Then... "I'm okay." These were the first words he spoke to his sleeping wife, Wanda, who lay just beyond the door, her eyes closed. "Wanda, you're awake?" He slowly moved back the covers, pulled up one of her legs, and carefully felt her foot. A couple of days of barefeet was enough for him. Very painful. Wanda smiled. "You're a regular early riser." A shrug. "It's a good job. I don't have to be on the job until 10:00 a.m." She put her hand on his, and he thought about it for a moment, then tugged her closer. He wasn't wearing a shirt. Her fingers stroked his chest. "You're all right?" He put on his tie and breathed in the jasmine scent from the leatherette couch pillow. "My
